

Publication standards for submitting articles

UCINA INTERNACIONAL (International Innovation and International News) is a publication of dialogue with the community, with an accessible vocabulary to the public in general, and for students in particular. UCINA is promoted by the Faculty of International Studies at the Universidad de Congreso, coordinated by the Center of Applied Research to Practice (CIOP) and published by the Editorial of the Universidad de Congreso (EdiUC).

The journal publishes works every year which, in addition to having methodological rigor, represent a contribution to the progress of the academic field of International Studies. Although the magazine focuses on publications in Spanish, it plans to include articles in English and Portuguese that the Editorial Board considers to be of interest.

Results of original research, theoretical developments, articles reviews, book reviews, projects, new professional experiences, conferences given at the FEI and/or at the Universidad de Congreso, among others, may be published in UCINA INTERNACIONAL, with the aim of creating knowledge of application to the reality that surrounds us.

The works must be unpublished, not admitting those that have been totally or partially published or that are in the process of publication or have been presented to another journal for evaluation. It is assumed that all the people listed as authors have given their consent through a letter addressed to the director of the journal, and that any person cited as a source of personal communication consents to such citation.

The Editorial Committee reserves the right to reject or NOT accept those articles that attempt, with comments and opinions, against government, religious, business and/or personal institutions.
